Long Hair

"About a year ago my hair was coming out very fast, so I bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor. It stopped the falling and made my hair grow very rapidly, until now it is 45 inches in length."—Mrs. A. Boydston, Atchison, Kans.
There's another hunger than that of the stomach. Hair hunger, for instance. Hungry hair needs food, needs hair vigor—Ayer's. This is why we say that Ayer's Hair Vigor always restores color, and makes the hair grow long and heavy. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.
If your druggist cannot supply you, send us one dollar and we will express you a bottle. We will give the name of your nearest express office. Address, J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.

MESS ROOM GOSSIP.

Thirty-eight thousand swords have been ordered by Chili from a German firm.
Soldiers three found guilty of drunkenness in one year will be summarily dismissed from the army.
Kites are to be substituted for the balloons now used on board Russian war vessels for observation purposes.
Men going down in the new submarines for the first two or three times become almost stupefied by the propelling fumes of the gasoline used in propelling the vessels.
RAILWAY NOTES FROM FRANCE
In France a locomotive-driver gets about $50 a month, a stoker $30. More than 80 per cent. of the employees of French railways get less than $1 a month.
The railroads of France carried last year 491,793,773 passengers; those of the United States 584,695,935.
Of travelers on French railways only 5.4 per cent. go first class; 30.4 per cent. take second, and 64.2 third.

THE EVIL OF DRINK.

The Rev. Frank De Witt Tallmage Sounds Warning.
He Summons All Good People to Unite in a Movement Against the Solomonic Serpent of Intoxication.
[Copyright, 1902, Louis Kleppel, N. Y.]
CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—In this discourse the preacher summons all good people to unite in a movement against the great and growing national evil of strong drink. The text is Proverbs xxii, 32, "At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."
My father has now been dead about six months. Since his demise I have received scores of letters from many parts of this country asking me to define my position on the temperance question. Only yesterday a strong, earnest plea came from one of the New England states which went something like this: "Your father's voice always rang true in his hatred for the wine cup. Will you not come to our aid and help the thousands of mothers who have drunken husbands fight this relentless enemy of God and the home?" It is in answer to these letters that I shall state my belief and position upon the temperance question. But I speak with a broader purpose than merely to gratify curiosity. I want every man, woman and child who hates the saloon and who is consecrated for a combined combat against this arch fiend of the centuries to look upon me as a brother and a comrade. I pledge myself as the colleague of every foe of the intoxicating cup. At every opportunity, with voice and pen, I will thrust at this serpentine monster. It shall be my aim, as it should be the aim of every one of God's ministers, to rally, with all the influences at his command, the enemies of this hitherto invincible and unconquered foe of the human race. May God grant us to live to see the day when the fangs of this mighty monster shall have been extracted and when its head shall have been crushed and its vile carcass dismembered under the advancing hoofs of the white chargers of the gospel army.
The evil of intoxication is a universal curse. Its long, slimy, twisting coils spread over every land and are visible in every walk of life. There is hardly a man or woman sitting before me who has not had at least one near relative who has been cursed by the fatal bite of this crawling, insidious enemy. Perhaps that near relative was a father, a mother, an uncle, an aunt, a brother, a sister, a wife, a husband or a child. Alas, many of us can say we have not only had one, but many near relatives and friends who have gone down into drunkards' graves after they have lived the hopeless and humanly helpless, degraded earthly existence of the drunkard. Even as I am preparing this sermon news is published that a man who has filled high places in the service of his country, who bore a name honored in our history, has lost his life in a brawl in which he would never have been involved if he had not indulged in intoxicating drink.
Solomon compared the sin of intoxication to the writhings and twistings of a serpent and to the stinging of an adder because at that time poisonous serpents were everywhere. Every thicket was filled with a constellation of their gleaming eyes. Every desert was the home of the puff adder, lying half buried in the sand. Every swamp was the retreat of the water viper. Every hillside had for the traveler a warning hiss or rattle. Even unto this day many of the countries of the east are overrun with poisonous reptiles. In India alone over 50,000 inhabitants annually die from poisonous snake bites.
The serpents of intoxication have increased so rapidly that they are now innumerable. We hear their hiss in almost every legislative hall. We see their eyes gleaming out of almost every palace. We find them lying under the orange blossoms of the marriage altar, as well as in the detention hospitals for the patients who have their rooms filled with the coiling serpents of delirium tremens. We find many of our statesmen paralyzed by the glance of this adder's eyes, as a poor, little frightened sparrow might tremble and cower until she falls into the open mouth of the blacksnake which has charmed her. We find that even a few of the ministers who are supposed to be the light of the world are terrified by the sight of the serpent of intemperance, because the rich brewer may be the president of the board of trustees or the wealthy distiller's family may be the largest contributors to the financial support of the church.
There are four distinct reasons for hating this serpentine, evil of intoxication, four distinct reasons to wage against it unsparring and relentless warfare.—The first is because the serpent of intoxication destroys a man's brain, detaching his reason and utterly ruining his mental capacity for any kind of important work. As a merchant he will enter into wild speculations until often his whole fortune is swept away. As a physician he will unfit himself for the sickroom. As a lawyer he will ruin his practice, because he can no longer plead in the courtroom as he once could plead. And everywhere the cry will be raised about this poor, drunken mental wreck, no matter in what sphere of life he may live: "Make way! Make way! Leave him alone! He drinks! He drinks!"
The evil results of a man's mind long weakened by intoxicants are very far-reaching. We read with amazement how a boa constrictor can swallow down a calf or kid or deer apparently five times wider than the natural size of the serpent's throat. But every country boy has seen the same phenomenon upon a small scale. A snake with a throat hardly larger than your little finger will give chase to a large, fat toad. It will then gather together the two hind legs of the toad and by suction slowly draw the whole body down its throat and into the stomach. Then, if the country boy will pick up the snake by the tail and snap him as he would a whipcord, the serpent's mouth will open and the toad will be ejected, alive and well, as was Jonah when thrown from the mouth of the big fish after he had been voyaging for three days in its internal cavity. But, though the student of serperology may wonder at the size of a big toad which a small snake is able to swallow, his wonderment ought to be as nothing compared to the utter astonishment with which he sees the huge meal which the serpent of intoxication can swallow after the brain of its victim has been wrecked by strong drink. Without any apparent effort it can swallow down the merchant's store, the minister's pulpit, the lawyer's office, the surgeon's operating table, the mechanic's bench, the engineer's engine, the sea captain's ship. And, mark you, in order that the Solomonic serpent may accomplish this gastronomic feat its victim does not have to be intoxicated all the time. All that the minister has to do to lose his pulpit is to reel as a drunkard—just once. All that the engineer has to do to wreck his train is to be drunk—just once. All the physician has to do to make a wrong diagnosis and kill his patient is to be drunk—just once. On account, therefore, of the bedouin of a man's intellect and the unsettling of the human reason through the influence of the wine cup I hate the Solomonic adder with an intense hatred. I hate it with unutterable loathing. I hate it as God hates every Christian to hate sin.
A drunkard's heart through the touch of the adder of intoxication not only becomes a poisoned heart, but the mercies heart of an inhuman monster. In order to drink a drunkard is willing practically to go to any extreme. He is ready to let wife and children starve. I have known two drunkards who were willing to sell their own flesh and blood into a life of crime in order that they might get liquor with which to satisfy their diabolical thirst. These two drunkards were not men of the lowest social rank. They were men who were born in as good families as yours or mine. But why continue in this strain? Is there any need of my longer describing how the serpent of intoxication can destroy a man's love for his wife and his children? No. In the rags of the factories we see it; in the scandals of the divorce courts we read it; in the horrors of the reforming schools we can grope it. Let us pass on in our indictment of this coiling serpent of the wine cup.
The Solomonic serpentine evil destroys a man's soul as well as the temporal usefulness of his brain and the loving power of his heart. This is not a pleasant subject to touch. It is not pleasant because many of us have had friends, dear friends, who have met or are today on the way to meet a drunkard's doom. But, my brother, we must be true to the living as well as to the dead. If you had a loved one who was contemplating the commission of a heinous crime, what would you do? Why, you would go to that friend and say: "Brother, if you do this you will have to pass many years in jail. If you allow your angry passions to rise and commit murder, you will have to sit in the electric chair or stand under the hangman's noose. That is the law. That is the law which has been carried out in many instances in the past and will be carried out in many instances in the future."
Now, my friends, what is the divine punishment that will be meted out to all who have been slain by the sting of the Solomonic adder? Let me read part of just one verse from the divine oracles: "Shall the drunkard inherit heaven? What says the epistle of First Corinthians? 'Be not deceived; neither idolaters, adulterers nor thieves nor drunkards shall inherit the kingdom of God.' There is no need of reading further. That simple Pauline sentence covers the whole ground. It seems to harmonize with the Icelandic idea of hell, which is to be a great ice palace, the walls of which are covered with a huge mass of swaying, swinging serpents.
The Solomonic evil cannot only destroy a father's or a mother's temporal and eternal life, but it ruins their children also, because the drunkard's evil habit is inheritable. The drunkard's curse, which rests upon the parent's life, can be transmitted by the law of blood into the veins of the father's children and his children's children. Every physician is ready to testify that it is far easier for a drunkard's son to become a drunkard than for a child whose parents have never been cursed by the sting of the fatal adder of intoxication. So, my brother, as the Mohammedan mothers look upon the serpent as a sacred and holy creature, so the drunkard's children look upon their parents as sacred and holy creatures. I have seen a drunkard's child, a young boy, who was addicted to the curse of drink, not only destroying his own soul, but you are also destroying the immortal lives of the unborn generation. By looking upon the wine cup when it is red you are preparing the way to look into the bloodshot eyes and to listen to the blaspheming tongues of your children's children, who shall meet you at the judgment seat of Christ to arraign you as the cause of their evil inheritance and to curse you and to curse the day you were born.
But my subject is vast. I must forego much of what I would like to say in arraigning this serpentine monster and pass on to briefly discuss the means with which, by the grace of God, we can destroy it. And in this discussion I shall not touch upon the power of the ballot box. That is a theme in itself.
The sure antidote for the poison of the adder of intoxication must be found for Christians, first and last and all the time, in the blood of Jesus Christ. It is right to use human agencies for the cure of inebriety, but I believe human agencies will always fail unless they are blessed by the divine power—the power of the Holy Ghost. As a pastor and preacher and temperance worker I have personally tried to aid in the rescue of many drunkards. I have helped send some to the reformatory institutions. I have taken them into my own home and bought them medicines from the drug stores. I am free to confess that these human agencies failed except when those victims of strong drink have thrown themselves into the arms of God and clung to Jesus Christ as

FACTS About Medicine

"If your Vinol is such wonderful stuff, what's the need of harping about it so much in the paper." A remark heard in our store.
We answer: We advertise Vinol because we have found it a good thing.
We advertise Vinol under our own name and with our own guarantee, because it is different from the twenty medicines my friend alluded to. For instance, it is not a secret preparation. It is endorsed by physicians. It has a surprising record of cures right here in town. It has our absolute guarantee of money back if you are not helped.
We advertise Vinol to increase its usefulness. We may repeat, but we remember that the great Senator Benton said, "Ding-dong is the most effective argument," meaning that you have to say a thing a good many times before you can get people to believe it.
So we want to say once more that we believe Vinol will do effective work in ninety-eight cases out of one hundred of debility, nervousness, insomnia, bronchitis, hacking cough, lung troubles, and the obscure troubles of irritable and fretful men and women.
