A MYSTERY SOLVED.

The fact that the minister, pastor of the Buckport Union church, a bachelor who lived alone in the little parish cottage, wore wonderfully darned socks, although he confessed he could not darn them himself, created a great disturbance in the village.

The gossip spread and grew stronger until Rev. Mr. Nevins himself heard the entire story and then and there added to the mystery and the excitement by declaring not only that he did not know who was darning his socks, but that until he heard the gossip he did not know that they were darned.

To add further to the excitement the minister, who is considered one of the most desirable catches in the village, publicly stated that he would be willing to take the girl who could darn socks until he could not tell they were darned as his wife—providing, of course, that she was free, white, 21 years old, and unmarried. Furthermore, he declared that under favorable conditions he would not insist on the age limit.

On the same afternoon that the minister made his sweeping proposal of marriage the whole secret came out. Miss Ella Ramsey, who had been visiting over in Sedalia for two weeks, wrote to her chum, Miss Lida Rawson, and told the whole story.

She confessed that it was she who had been darning the parson's socks. She lived right back of the parsonage, and one day noticed Mrs. Kate Reilly, who does the minister's laundry work, hanging out some clothes, and she went through the back gate and into the yard behind the parsonage to speak to Mrs. Reilly about having her come to their house the following Thursday to do some cleaning. As she was returning through the yard, she noticed four or five pairs of the parson's socks hanging on the line, and observed that every one of them was out either at the heel or the toes. So, pitying the helpless bachelor, she had taken the socks home and darned them, returning them to the line that same afternoon.

Thereafter she made it part of her church duty to take the minister's socks off the line and darn them, taking care that no one saw her. She had no idea that it was going to create any comment.

Miss Ramsey is one of the prettiest girls in the town—and she meets all the minister's requirements except that she is only 20 years old. She is a brunette, small, alert, and determined, and she is admittedly one of the best young housekeepers in the town.

The mystery solved, everybody took it for granted that Parson Nevins would woo and win Miss Ramsey.

When the missionary society met at Mrs. Newton's house, Parson Nevins dropped in and instantly all the women began joking him about his proposal.

"Is the offer still open?" asked Mrs. Young.

"Really, ladies," said Mr. Nevins, "I spoke only in jest—"

"You've been taken seriously," remarked Mrs. Rickman. "Half the girls in town are practicing darning."

"You flatter and embarrass me, Mrs. Rickman," said the blushing minister.

"Well, anyhow, you can't back out now."

"I have no desire to," said the minister. "And I would suggest that we arrange the darning contest to be held in the church. Then we can charge admission and apply the proceeds toward purchasing a new carpet."

The idea met with instant approval in the village, and the darning contest was arranged. At first there was a noticeable reluctancy among the young women to enter, but finally Miss Jane Grove, who admits she is at least 37, announced that she would compete.

"Lord knows, it's my last chance," she said, laughingly. "I've got to win this time—or give up all hope."

After that candidates were advanced steadily. The committee in charge of the affair announced that the winner should have the privilege of refusing to marry the minister, and then several of the shy ones agreed to compete.

While the preparations were going forward Miss Ramsey returned from Sedalia, prettier than ever, and heard the news of the contest. The first evening that she was at home the minister called on her. He was blushing and stammering. He apologized profusely for his hasty words and thanked her warmly for her kindness in darning his socks for him.

And after long explanations and apologies, Rev. Mr. Nevins proposed to her. He told her he had loved her for many months and that he had intended to ask her to be his wife. Then he told her how he had been tangled into making his foolish offer to wed the girl who could darn his socks best.

Just what Miss Ramsey said to him is unknown, but the next morning she announced publicly that she intended to enter the contest. She made the announcement calmly and without a blush, and she added, proudly: "And if I win, I won't return the prize."

Half the men in town are pulling for Miss Ramsey to win and those who bet are putting up a little money that she will be the mistress of the parsonage.

The judges will be three married men, who have been wearing darned socks for years.

Also, already, and this three weeks before the contest, it is hinted that the judges are prejudiced. But whether this is true or not both Rev. Mr. Nevins and Miss Ramsey are serenely confident.—Chicago Tribune.
