MURDER SENSATION

Philadelphia Doctor Was Victim of Cyanide of Potassium.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 1.—The Philadelphia police in the case of Dr. William H. Wilson, who died at his home Friday night after drinking a portion of a bottle of ale that had been sent to him through the mails. An autopsy performed by the coroner's physician and an examination made of the vial taken from the body proves conclusively that Dr. Wilson died of cyanide of potassium poisoning. The ale came to the physician on Tuesday a week ago by express, and in the mail on the same day he received a letter in typewritten form, purporting to have been sent by the Peter Schen Brewing company, informing him that a sample bottle of ale had been shipped to him for trial. Investigation showed, according to the police, that Schen brews no ale and that the company never sent any such letter as that received by the physician.

Unusual as are the poisoning features of the case, more extraordinary is the motive which the police assign for what they are certain is a murder. Though Dr. Wilson had been living for more than twelve years in the house where he drank the fatal potion, he never put out a physician's sign and was not known in a general sense as a practitioner. Withal, he had a large clientele, made up mostly of wealthy women, and it is declared by the coroner and the police that he made an affluent living as a malpractitioner. In his practice, it is the theory of the police, Dr. Wilson caused the death of a member of the family of a young man who will be charged with being the poisoner. The death, it is alleged, caused the young man to brood until he could no longer contain himself when he sought to put an end to the physician's practices by sending him poison, rather than going into court to have his family history exposed to the world.

Banker Confesses Theft.
Robert Ohmmeis, Jr., cashier of the Marine Trust company, at Atlantic City, N. J., was arrested, charged with a defalcation of $20,500. He made a confession in which he says that he played the stock market; that one loss followed another until he was hopelessly involved. He is under $11,000 bail for trial in October.

Announcement of Ohmmeis' defalcation, which has extended over a period of several months, caused a sensation in local social circles, and he resorted to those who have known Ohmmeis and his wife socially is almost as great as the stir caused in financial circles and in other banks which unscrupulously have been the vehicles by which his thefts were concealed.

On the authority of State Banking Commissioner Watkins, who made an examination of the funds and securities of the company, the bank is in no danger because of the defalcations. The loss sustained in excess of the amount for which he has been bonded will be made good.

VERDICT AGAINST HEARST

Charges of Fraud Fail and Court Orders Decision For McClellan.

New York July 1.—Justice Lambert directed the jury to find a verdict for McClellan in the election recount suit, upholding Mr. McClellan's election in 1905 as mayor of New York by nearly 3000 plurality over William H. Hearst, the contestant.

This is set at rest the claims of fraud made ever since the election by Hearst, his newspapers and his lawyers. The recount of all the votes cast in New York city involved the opening of several thousand ballot boxes and has been in progress for weeks.

While Hearst made a net gain of about 700 votes in the recount this was an average gain of only a fraction of a vote to each ballot box opened and showed no organized attempt at fraud.

When this was proved conclusively Clarence J. Sherr, counsel for the contestant, asserted that the ballot boxes were stuffed and that Hearst was defrauded of 6053 votes.

In his address to the jury Justice Lambert said that no fraud had been proved in the case, and if he should permit the disfranchisement of citizens on such slight evidence this country would last but a short time.

AT DEATH'S DOOR

Little Hope Held Out For Recovery of Bishop Potter.

Cooperstown, N. Y., July 1.—After a day in which the patient visibly lost strength and the end seemed near, Bishop Henry Codrington Potter, of the New York Protestant Episcopal diocese, was reported by his physician to be resting somewhat more comfortably than at any time during the past several hours. The condition of the eminent patient is still critical, however, and no great hopes are held out for the slight rally. Oxygen is being freely administered.

Gathered at the bedside of the bishop, at the country place of his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Clark Potter, are the members of his family, summoned when the serious character of his illness became apparent. At more than one time hope was practically abandoned and the gradual ebbing of the patient's strength gave rise to fears that the life spark might go out any moment.

Telegrams of inquiry as to the bishop's condition and expressions of hope for his recovery came in a constant stream from all over the country, while numerous cable messages of similar purport were received from various parts of the world. Little re-assurance could be given the anxious inquirers, owing to the admittedly critical condition of the patient, and even the slight turn for the better was not made the basis for any marked expressions of belief that the issue would be favorable.

Bishop Potter's health has for a long time been far from good, but it was not until early in the spring that his condition began to cause anxiety. When, on Easter Sunday, he was unable to take part in church services it was announced that he was suffering from acute indigestion. Later it became known that he was experiencing an attack of stomach trouble and liver trouble, and early in May it developed that he was too ill to think of attending the Pan-Atlantic congress in London. The bishop was much affected, too, it was said, by the death of Mr. Morcan Dlx. of Trinity parish on April 20, this serving to aggravate his illness. He made a sufficient recovery, however, to allow of his removal here on June 10.

During the past few days, however the heat had a serious effect upon the bishop. He is in his seventy-fifth year, his powers of resistance are impaired by his illness, and he rapidly grew worse.

Fall On Hay Fork Fatal.

Barnesboro, N. J., July 1.—Isaac Taylor, sixteen years old, was instantly killed at his home here by falling from a load of hay upon the lines of a picket. Young Taylor was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Taylor, who own and operate a farm here. As Taylor is employed as a rural mail carrier the boy had been doing most of the farm work, and it was while he was driving into the barn with a load of hay that he met his death. Sooted on top of the hay the lad's head hit the top of the door frame. He was thrown from the barn, his head striking the floor with terrible force, while his body was impaled upon the lines of the fork which penetrated his abdomen. He died instantly.

Leaps From Bridge.

Philadelphia, July 1.—Paul S. DeWitt, a hardware salesman, committed suicide by jumping from the Market street bridge into the Schuylkill river. A number of persons saw the man climb over the railing, then drop to the water below. He did not come to the surface, but his body was recovered by the crew of a police boat. In the pockets of the clothing were found several letters recommending him as "an honest and industrious man." He had recently lost his position.

Man Who Seized Colgoles Dead.

Chicago, July 1.—Albert Gallagher, the secret service man who seized the wife of Colgoles when the latter shot President McKinley at Buffalo, died here. Gallagher was mistaken for the assassin at the time of the shooting and was beaten by the crowd. An affection of the liver developed from his injuries, resulting in his death.
