R. BYRD

Aboard SS Jacob Ruppert Enroute to Little America.

Rear Admiral Richard Byrd was elated today at word from Lincoln Ellsworth, fellow explorer in the Antarctic Ice that Little America was practically as he left it four years ago. The airplanes that he left and the equipment and houses were intact. Ellsworth's message related the discovery was made by Bernt Balchen, veteran Polar flier now with the Ellsworth expedition, who flew to Little America for a brief inspection and returned with the good news to the Ellsworth Flagship. Approaching the Bay of Whales the message sent from the Ellsworth ship "Wyatt Earp" to the Jacob Ruppert said "Little America" is as you left it with planes in good condition except for digging out wireless masts, or but tremendous pressure ridges show in front of "Ver Sur Mer Bay" making it impassable for dogs teams."
