Mr. and Mrs. William H. Blasdel.

William H. Blasdel was born in Barnet, Sept. 27th, 1838. He married Julia Hayden of Albany. Two children were born to them, Julia Ella and Lulu Levine. Mrs. Blasdel died. He then married Maria Page of Plainfield. She was an estimable woman, keen of mind, alert in business, cheerfully bearing, toward close of life, physical sufferings, still making the home as bright as possible. She died eight years ago. For his third wife, Mr. Blasdel married Emma Louise Langmaid of Bethlehem, N. H. Mr. Blasdel's sister, Mrs. L. D. Webster, mother of Henry S. Webster, being in poor health for some time previous to her death on Oct. 14th, 1918, made Mr. Blasdel decide not to leave Vermont to go South, until she was better, or should have passed on. She was a motherly sister to him, although only about five years his senior. So in about three months of earthly time, sister and brother were united again. This community was shocked to learn of the death of Mrs. Emma L. Blasdel, followed so closely by his departure. They were spending the holidays with Mrs. Blasdel's sister in Southern Pines, N. C., where she died Saturday Jan. 11th, of pneumonia. Mr. Blasdel had been suffering from a severe cold when the death of his wife was announced to him, he immediately became unconscious (having had an opiate given him previously) from which condition he never recovered; and on Monday, Jan. 13, he also entered the new life. So near together did they go that it seems like a continued journey together. But this one was not planned by them. It seems fitting they should have entered their new home together. None of us have long to wait before we, too, will try the new life and we are more and more sure that it is only a circumstance in life that is unbroken. The memory of time spent in their presence, though not often did we meet, gives us pleasure. For the very sunshine of kindness dwelt in her face. Hers was a life of unselfish service all the way along for Mr. Blasdel. Had his health been better we know she would have entered into outside work with hands and heart as she could not do while rendering so much time and strength in the home. A sweetness and earnestness and frankness in her character will remain with us as worthy of our imitation.
During the early part of Mr. Blasdel's life he was interested in the mercantile business in Lowell for 15 years or more. Afterward he became connected with public affairs.

He was vice president of Barton National bank and director of same for a number of years, until it went into the Trust company of Barton.

The elder daughter, Ella, remains to mourn her father's death, Lulu Levine having died some years ago, while in Southern Pines.
They were seeking health and happiness in a southern summerland. Instead they were led by an unseen hand into "A land of rest and beauty,
Of light and song,
Where kindred souls were singing
Among the white robed throng"

Mr. Fred M. Allchurch.

The community was saddened Friday, Jan. 17th, when Mabel Clara Dodge, wife of F. M. Allchurch, passed to that higher life, after a week's illness of pneumonia, being seriously ill from the very first. All that medical skill and loving hands could do to save her was in vain.

Mrs. Allchurch was born in Glover July 12, 1886, the only child of Oramel B. and Clara Lyman Dodge. The family moved to Barre when she was a young girl and after a few years moved back to Barton where she attended Barton Academy and graduated in 1904. She was married to Fred M. Allchurch Jan. 3, 1906, and came to Orleans where Mr. Allchurch bought a jewelry business. Her father and mother have always lived with her since her marriage and it is to them the sympathy of the community goes out as well as to the sorrowing husband, for they have lost their all.

She was a young woman of charming personality and left many friends to mourn her loss.
The funeral was held at the home Sunday, Rev. Smithers and Rev. Hamilton officiating and she was laid to rest in the family lot in Glover.

One of Our Returned Soldiers.

William A. Coathup came home from Camp Devens a few days ago with an honorable discharge in his pocket and stripes on his sleeves for service overseas and wounds received. His is a record that is hard to beat. He enlisted June 1st, 1918, and left Camp Devens for France the last of the month. After landing he was made a part of the regular army and fought with Gen. Pershing's men in the machine gun company, 18th Infantry. He was in France only seven days when he went over the top the first time. He was in action from early in July, seeing service at the battles of Soissons, Lorraine, Verdun and St. Mihiel, with only brief rest periods. Oct. 18 he was buried alive by a nearby bursting shell, followed by a wave of poison gas. He lay there unconscious 24 hours before being picked up. He is still lame from a wound by shrapnel in his left heel and one eye nearly blinded and the other affected by the gas. He was in base hospital No. 80 at Bourne, France, just beginning then to get the use of his eyes. He arrived at Newport News, Va., Dec. 24th, and was fortunate in getting home so soon.
To us for whom such men as he have gone forward and stemmed the tide of Prussianism it brings the realities of war a little nearer to meet and talk with one who has gone through all the horrors and hardships. Mr. Coathup has had some experience in running an engine and will answer to a call from the government and go to Boston Jan. 27th to study for a first-class engineer at a school for vocational education.
