

WAS TORTURED FOR TEN YEARS

With Terrible Stomach Trouble Until She Tried "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MRS. F. S. STOLZ

8307 Sacto Ave., Sacramento, Cal. "I had Stomach Trouble for 10 years, which became so bad that I got Stomach Cramps two or three times a week.

After years of terrible torture, I read about 'Fruit-a-tives' or Fruit Liver Tablets, and sent for a trial box and wrote that it was the last remedy I would use—if 'Fruit-a-tives' did not help me, I would die.

After taking the trial box, I felt better, so kept on taking 'Fruit-a-tives' for nearly a year, and am thankful to say 'Fruit-a-tives' saved my life.

It also saved a friend from an operation for Stomach Trouble, after he had given up all hope of getting well."

Mrs. F. S. STOLZ, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price, by FRUIT-A-TIVES LIMITED, OGDENSBURG, N. Y.

A year ago I had rheumatism so that I could not get out of bed, or even turn myself in bed. I took the famous A. J. P. Rheumatic Remedy and in less than a week I was out of bed and attending to my farm work. I would further say that I haven't had any rheumatism since. If you have a friend that has the terrible disease tell him about A. J. P.

STATE GETS WAR COLORS

Presented at State House Last Week, and Accepted.

The presentation of the colors and shields of the world war organizations of which Vermont boys formed a part, took place in the representatives' hall in the state house in Montpelier on the evening of Oct. 23d. It was attended by some 200 veterans of the war and about 350 persons, mostly relatives and friends of those attending. The program as arranged by Adjt. Gen. H. T. Johnson was a very interesting one. The observance was made the more notable because of the fact that it was a year ago that the only two boys killed in the 101st ammunition train lost their lives in action.

Col. F. B. Thomas of Montpelier presided over the exercises. He referred to the early history of the nation and the sturdy men who have come down through the history of Vermont, that the boys of this war have accomplished as much as any of them. It is not recorded that any foe ever got away with a Vermont flag although he admitted we came near losing it in this war. He believed that the boys who have seen the historic things about the state house have carried that idea of what their forefathers accomplished with them in the present war. He read several lessons from persons who could not attend. These included Gen. C. R. Edwards, Congressman E. H. Dale and Frank L. Greene and Senators W. P. Dillingham and Carroll S. Page.

Capt. E. W. Gibson of Brattleboro gave a brief history of the 1st Vermont and the 57th Pioneer regiments. He was personnel adjutant of both. He was with the latter organization when there were but four men left, himself commanding and three others. This was the size of his organization when he came home and when he was the commanding officer of the battleship Vermont, which brought the boys home, the ship being designated to bring home the 57th Pioneer regiment, making him the ranking officer.

Capt. Gibson told of the tragedies through which the 1st Vermont and 57th went in efforts to recruit, only to see their men going to other organizations, but thanks to Gov. H. F. Graham the 1st Vermont was the best equipped regiment this side of the Mississippi river. If it had not been for this fact the boys would not have gone to France as soon as they did nor would they have seen service so soon. After all, the 57th was a Vermont organization, for there were 50 officers and some 430 men when the 2,500 Tennessee recruits came to the organization. In two months 10,000 men were placed on the roll of the regiment, many later going to other organizations. Seventeen days after the Tennessee boys left their homes the regiment was en route for France. Influenza affected the regiment, some 236 men dying upon arrival in France.

In the last big drive the regiment became a replacement organization, leaving Capt. Gibson and three others, but the organization was kept complete. All of the routine of a regiment occurred. All of the reports used by a regiment were regularly made as though there were 3,400 men, including regimental inspections.

Color Sergt. Albert J. Seguin of Newport gave a history of the 302d field artillery and presented the colors. His was a pleasing talk as he explained the part which the organization had in the last days of the war with only 11 deaths, three of which were Vermont boys, Sergt. Coppings, Corporal Noble and Pvt. Buffons.

Probably as welcome a visitor as there appeared was Col. W. J. Keville, commanding officer of the 101st ammunition train, who was given a round of applause when he came forward. His story was one of considerable interest and was well told. He explained the foundation of the train, how he paid the Vermont boys some nice compliments for their excellent service. He read several citations which the train received for its bravery. He told the ordeals through which the boys passed, the suffering from meningitis of which the boys back home did not know, the delays of getting equipment after they reached France, and then the excellent work they did in service in the Toul sector, at the battle of the Marne, back of the St. Mihiel sector and later near Verdun.

When asked what day he could come to Vermont he wrote Gen. Johnson Oct. 23, because it was the observance of the death of the two boys who were killed. His beautiful tribute to the memory of those boys brought tears to the major portion of the audience. The last citation he read was a long one from Gen. C. R. Edwards.

No remarks were made when the presentation of the guidons took place because of the lateness of the hour. These were presented as follows: Co. L, 101st ammunition train, Capt. Harold M. Howe; Co. E, Capt. Roy B. Miner, Brattleboro; Co. F, Sergt. Arlon C. Spaulding, St. Albans; Co. G, Corp. Chester Mooney, Newport.

Lieut. Chas. A. Pellett of Brattleboro presented the shield of the 101st machine gun battalion, Capt. Harold P. Sheldon of Fair Haven that of the 102d machine gun battalion, Capt. Joseph A. Everts of St. Albans of the 103d machine gun battalion and Sergt. Paul A. Raymond of Stowe of the 103d infantry. Each of them told of the experiences through which their organizations passed, giving some interesting data concerned with the same.

Fred L. Laird, Jr., spoke for the 1,500 boys who went into the navy from Vermont, giving an excellent history of the work done by the boys in that department of our defense.

Fre. John M. Thomas of Middlebury college, who spoke on the history of Vermont's 12,000 men in the war, said in part: "If the story could all be told, the record of Vermont in the great war would be found not less honorable than her part in the Civil war. All honor to the Vermonters who fought side by side in the glorious 26th! And not less honor to the men who, without the stimulus and comradeship of men from home also did their duty wherever and however the call of duty came."

Lieut. Gov. Mason S. Stone accepted the colors and shields for the state of Vermont, acting for Gov. Clement. He said in part:

"Vermont is proud to receive these standards of cleanliness and of trustiness and of uprightiness in character and conduct, observed and maintained by our Vermont and other American boys overseas, and I am pleased to state at this time that from personal inquiry and observation I am convinced that no army ever conducted itself so well, so in accord with the standards of right living and high ideals, as the American army in France.

"But Vermont is especially proud to receive these insignia on account of the splendid service of her boys. While all did not get to the front and into the trenches, while no great numbers of our boys heard the supreme command, since the supreme moment and made the supreme sacrifice by going over the top, while not many in comparison made the supreme sacrifice, yet every Vermont boy stood ready to perform his supreme duty and he would have performed it even if ordered into the very tragedy of the battle front. He would have performed it on account of the old patriotic spirit within him, and, after all, it is the spirit rather than the near deed that we admire, honor and respect.

"Therefore, whatever the service in which any Vermont boy was engaged the menial or the tragic, we know that he had the ring-trim spirit and he is thereby worthy of the common high honor."
