

dance of our productions agriculture required but little protection, and that confined to a few branches only. And we would ask at the time these sentences were uttered, what branches of agriculture except the raising of wool, then but little thought of, required protection against foreign regulations? This however, is one of the branches of agricultural production which Mr. Clay intended to protect as appears from the whole tenor of his course ever since. Nor can any one reasonably suppose that a statesman whose motto has ever been protection to American industry would exclude protection to any branch which needed it, especially of agriculture which absorbs the labor of nine-tenths of our population.

But it is not clear that our editor intended to create upon the public mind the impression that Mr. Clay depreciated Protection to Agriculture in general, while the whole speech belies such a construction, and that portion of it quoted was intended by Mr. Clay to show how very inadequate was protection to manufactures in proportion to their wants when compared with other interests which needed less.

This intention of Eastman to create a false impression is further manifested by the fact that the mis-quotation is connected with garbled extracts from Mr. Clay's other speeches designed to make out Mr. Clay an anti-tariff man. This our friend knew to be false, and he therefore confidently asserted the language attributed to Mr. Clay to be false. And we confidently appeal to the public whether it is not virtually and substantially so. Why did our editor suppress the word "little," and "the regulations of foreign powers," but to lead the public to suppose that Mr. Clay saw no need of protection to agriculture under any circumstances or to any branch of it, which contradicts the whole tenor of his life?

But we have already spent too much time upon our neighbor of the Age. He has an abominable way in common with his political clique of perverting the acts and language of public men to serve his purposes which it would be folly to quarrel with every time he chooses to indulge in it. But what was our astonishment in perusing the proceedings of the Loco-Foco Convention recently assembled in Middlebury to find that they had seen fit to interpose in this small controversy by taking poor Eastman under their guardianship, and on motion of E. W. Drury had most magnanimously resolved in substance, that the editor of the Age was one of the most truthful upright and firm journalists in the country, while in relation to the attack made through the Galaxy upon this pangon of the democracy, we are denounced as being "unworthy of being an editor of a paper by "candid and high-minded men of any party." We are willing to leave the public to decide the relative merits of the editor of the Galaxy and the editor of the Age in any respect in which a comparison can be made.

But has it come to this, that the Addison County democracy have put themselves under the lead of the Coon Hunter of Woodstock, and the ex-Postmaster of Middlebury. And how pitiable that so respectable a body of men as might have composed that convention, (although we are informed that very few were present) should submit to pander the petty passions of these men, and especially to become the conduit pipe through which Mr. Drury should discharge his venom upon us. But what shows the total disregard to truth of the vipers individual who made the resolution is, that he has made it assert a falsehood in the preamble, even by the admission of Eastman himself. The resolution says: Eastman published as the assertion of Mr. Clay contained in the first volume of his life and speeches. "Agriculture wants little or no protection against the regulations of foreign powers." Now the Age itself shows no such thing. The sentence quoted there is "Agriculture needs no protection."

For the Northern Galaxy.

I attended the Loco Foco Addison County Convention for nomination of County Senators, at the Town Room on the 31st ult, and during the remark of E. D. Barber Esq., on the subject of the Tariff, he challenged any person to show that Henry Clay was any more of a Tariff man than James K. Polk. Not wishing to interrupt the meeting, and delaying the marriage ceremony then to be performed between Mr. Loco Foco and Miss Liberty, I remained silent. I accept the challenge, and answer through your columns. There is one point upon which Mr. Clay and Mr. Polk agree, and that is to raise a sufficient sum for the support of Government economically administered. I shall assume that the sum necessary for such support will be twenty one millions of dollars per year. I shall also assume that three millions will be raised by the public lands yearly, which Mr. Polk is in favor of having applied to the purposes of the General Government, leaving eighteen millions to be supplied by duties on foreign imports. While Mr. Clay is in favor of the avails of the public lands being distributed to the States where it rightfully belongs, after the old National debt was paid, leaving the twenty one millions to be supplied by a Tariff of duties on Foreign imports, which must be, in my opinion, a higher rate of duties than one sufficient to raise the eighteen millions upon the principle of Mr. Polk and consequently more protective in its character. Besides the income of the public lands has varied before 1840 from one million and a half to 24 millions, the latter sum being enough to supply all the expenses of the government leaving nothing for duties on imports, and consequently utterly abolishing all protection unless distributed to the States to whom it justly belongs. And does this constitute no difference between Clay and Polk on the subject of Protection. I might quote from the speeches of Mr. Clay and Mr. Polk to show the difference between them on other points of the same question, but I consider it absolutely unnecessary, for none but the willfully blind can have any doubt whatever on the subject.

ces, its men and its measures. We denounce Loco-focoism as a faction in our government which sustains itself in power by deceiving the people, and the most shameless abuse of their opponents hitherto unparalleled in the history of political warfare.

But after all we should have charity for these vituperative Loco-Focos. The raving wing of dismay and disappointment is now spread frightfully over them. Their equanimity is most sadly shaken. They are sweeping over the dam of destruction with as much rapidity as the bitterest foes could desire. Let them discharge the fumes of their vindictive wrath upon us. In the day of their triumph the Romans suffered even their slaves to vilify their masters. Ah, how the news of Whig victories falls on the saddened hopes and cheerless spirits of Loco-focoism, confirming their fears and palsying all their efforts. We cannot complain if they vent abundantly their black and bilious spleen upon us. We are certainly endeavoring to promote the triumph which entitles them to do so. Let them should otherwise swell up, and die of their own venom, we hope they will continue their amiable labors till after the next Presidential canvass.

REV. ALANSON ST. CLAIR.

We invite the attention of our readers to the following notice of the above named gentleman. It is from the Granite Freeman of August 1st 1844, and is an expression of the Editor's opinions. It will be observed also, that the Granite Freeman is the leading organ of the Third Party in New Hampshire. We had heard indirectly that the character of Mr. St. Clair was of a very questionable nature to say the least, but we must say, we were not prepared to see the publication of such an expression of views from a Third Party Editor, relative to their "Hero and Champion." The Editor speaks probably with some personal knowledge of the Rev. gentleman, as he is from New Hampshire where he, Mr. St. Clair, was formerly Editor of the People's Advocate, a paper devoted to the interests of the Third Party. And if New Hampshire Abolitionists, cannot think Mr. St. Clair a fair man, we think it behooves Vermont Abolitionists to use a good share of caution in placing confidence in him. We ask a careful perusal of the article that follows.

A RELIGIOUS RENEGADE. Under this startling caption our friend Wood, of the Congressional Journal, bestows a column of ra her severe castigation upon A. St. Clair, former publisher of the People's Advocate. The crimes so vehemently laid to charge are, that he has taken himself off rather unceremoniously from the North church, in this town, and joined the True Wesleyans; that he had previously turned theological somersets, in and out of almost every sectarian fold; that he has the dictation of a pope, and the wiliness of a fox; that he is the prince of beggars; that St. Clair was the Haman and Mr. Wood the Mordecai of New Hampshire Anti-slavery; and that the Journal advocates all practicable anti-slavery without pay—but has never begged and never will. These are the specifications in the case of Wood vs. St. Clair, as set forth in the Journal. It we had no other reasons than these for distrusting Mr. St. Clair's integrity, we should respect him much more than we are now able to. We are sorry to believe that he is not a man to be trusted, and that his loss of character among the abolitionists of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, has a more serious cause than his theological somersets, or even his rivalry with Mr. Wood among the Congregationalists of New Hampshire. We feel constrained to warn the True Wesleyans against this man. He will be only an injury to them. He is one of those friends from whom we should pray to be saved.

For the Atlas.

We find the following article in the Boston Post of July 28th:—

Vermont.—The Whigs have nominated William Slade, the coadjutor of Great Britain, in her worst designs upon this country for Governor.

In his letter to the British Governor Craig, of Canada, dated Burlington, Vermont, February 14, 1800, HENRY, the British spy, wrote of MARTIN CHITTENDEN, the then Whig Governor of Vermont, as follows:—"In case of war he will use his influence to preserve the State neutral, and will refuse obedience to any command of the general government which can tend to interrupt the good understanding between the citizen of Vermont and his majesty's subjects in Canada." I need not add, (writes Henry) "THE STATE OF VERMONT MAY BE CONSIDERED AS AN ALLY OF GREAT BRITAIN." This was an infamous calumny, but if William Slade elected Governor, it will afford some ground for his telling his English friends that "Vermont may be considered an ally of Great Britain."

The writer of this article in the Boston Post is certainly the most unbounded and illimitable LIAR in existence. He would insinuate that WILLIAM SLADE, in 1809, had, in connexion with Martin Chittenden, treasonable intercourse with an agent of the British Government. In 1809, Mr. Slade was a law student in Middlebury, in the office of the Hon. Joel Doobittle, having been graduated from Middlebury College in 1807. He was an active and decided Democrat, of the Jeffersonian school. During the War, he was the editor and Publisher of the National Standard, the only Democratic paper in Addison county—and, while under his control, it possessed more influence, and was edited with more ability, than any other Democratic paper in the State. Martin Chittenden was not Governor of Vermont in 1809—nor was he elected Governor until 1813 and 1814. For him, we have nothing to say. He was no Whig. He was elected Governor by the Federalists, in 1813 and 1814. He was a supporter of Gen. Jackson, during his whole term—and died a few years since, as full blooded a Loco-foco as the lying writer of the article which we have copied from the Boston Post.

VERMONT.

Under the head of our advertising columns it will be seen, Mrs. C. P. Clarke proposes to form a class for instructions in the French language. It would be proper to say Mrs. C. together with her husband the present Methodist preacher in this town formerly prepared themselves for a French mission. They speak the language so common in their family as to make it almost the vernacular tongue. Mr. C. for several years past has been in the habit of preaching and labouring among the French on the borders of Canada.

Mrs. C. has taught the language much for the last four years, and has certificates from those who have had good opportunities of judging of her capacity, and among them is one from I. P. Edwards, Professor of French in the Troy Seminary, who says:—"I can safely aver that her pronunciation is in that polite tongue as fine and correct as that of a native. Her system which is oral, is so thorough, and she has such an engaging and agreeable manner of imparting instructions to her pupils, that they cannot fail of making great proficiency in a very short time so as to astonish those who have never witnessed the system this lady pursues."

CLAY CLUB MEETING.

The people in this vicinity, and especially Abolitionists are earnestly desired to attend the meeting of the Clay Club on Monday evening next at the Town Room, notified in this paper. Nothing do we so ardently wish as that a fair display of the arguments in relation to this subject should be made. Let all real seekers after truth, all friends of the Union and Constitution, and all who are opposed to the extension of slavery and for alleviating by all rational & constitutional means the evils of this unhappy institution, be present upon this occasion.

ZACHARIAH POULSON, formerly proprietor of Poulson's (Philadelphia) Daily Advertiser, died in that city on the 30th ult.—He was the last link which connected the publishing community with those of the days of Franklin.

LESSONS IN FRENCH.

MRS. C. P. CLARKE.

Would respectfully inform the citizens of Middlebury that having had several applications to give lessons in French, she has consented to do so, provided a sufficient number should be procured to form a class. The method of teaching the pronunciation of that polite tongue so difficult to foreigners, is oral, and will enable the pupils to speak as well as read French. Her terms will depend somewhat on the number of the class, but in all cases will be reasonable. For further information inquire at the Methodist Parsonage, first door north of the jail. Middlebury, Aug. 8th, 1844.

P. S. Mrs. C. could give lessons to a juvenile class on reasonable terms as her own children are now learning French.
