CARD OF THANKS.

The subscribers, in acknowledgement of the kind assistance, rendered during the sickness and death of our father, by neighbors and friends, desire, through this medium, to return our sincere thanks to all such persons assuring them that their smallest acts, in that direction were fully appreciated. Hoping that when affliction overtakes them, that they in turn may meet with like sympathy and assistance. We remain thankfully yours.
Mrs. A. R. Cobb,
O. H. Whitman,
Mr. & Mrs. Frank Wilder,
Mr. & Mrs. Ira Evans.

Mr. Alvara Shumway, a former resident of this town, now of Randolph, N. Y. has recently been afflicted with a painful disease of the eye making it necessary to remove one of them. The operation was recently performed at Chicago. We quote from the Peotone, Ill., Eagle:
"Dr. E. B. Shumway took his father to Chicago Tuesday, for the removal of his right eye, which had caused him a great amount of almost unbearable pain, being afflicted with chronic glaucoma, one of the most painful diseases known. Although Mr. Shumway is nearly 76 years of age, yet he took the train to Chicago, withstood the severe operation and returned to Peotone the same day. His fortitude is certainly a very remarkable feature. He is receiving the best of care at the home of his son, and is doing as well as can be expected."

We briefly announced in a part of our last issue the death of Mr. John G. Whitman, which occurred about two o'clock on the afternoon of last Thursday.

Mr. Whitman was born in this town Nov. 13, 1809, and has always resided here. About 22 years ago his wife died aod since that time he continued to occupy his homestead, having one or more of his children with him. Funeral services were held Sunday at the Baptist church, Rev. O. P. Fuller, officiating. Mr. Whitman left seven children, five of whom, Mrs. Cobb of Brattleboro, Mrs. Wilder of Troy, N. Y., Mrs. Evans of this place, and O. H. of Bellows Falls, were present, also a grandson, son of Ora of Manchester. Mr. Silas Whitman of this village is the only remaining member left of his generation.

"Uncle John" as he was universally called, had resided here so long that he had become a village fixture and his well known walk, and his short emphatic voice will be missed on our streets.

DANDELION GREENS.

"Not here, not here, my child" but way out in Idaho. Last week we received a letter from Mrs. Danl. Roby (formerly of Landgrove) of Cameron, Idaho, dated Feb. 24th. She says "we are to have dandelion greens for dinner to-day," and to emphasize it sends along a large dandelion plant. Mrs. Roby also sent us a copy of the Nez Perce News and the Sprague Sentinel. From the latter, dated Feb. 10, we make the following extract:

"There has been the most delightful weather experienced in Lincoln county during the past week. The air has been as soft and as pleasant as one would naturally look for it to be in the middle of the month of April. 'Oh, how grand!' enthusiastically exclaimed one of a party of five, bound for the big bend, on Thursday morning; 'how I do wish I could send a few bushels of this climate to the poor shivering wretches in Kansas, Dakota and Minnesota.' 'Don't say that,' spoke up another, 'for one sniff of this nice morning air would bring the entire people of those three States down upon us as soon as they could reach Sprague, and they would all want to make the trip on the lightning express at that."

There you have it! Well, if anybody wants to live on the west side of the rocky mountains for the sake of a little April weather, why, let them. Out here in good old Vermont, in this year of grace and on the 15th of March the sun is shining brightly and the air, Oh, how pure! How invigorating as it sweeps over our 6 or 7 feet of snow. Go to with your dandelion greens, you haven't got any snow on which you can wax your sugar!

☞FOUND—A Ladies toboggan. The owner can have it by calling at this office and paying for this notice.

WINHALL HOLLOW.

The Cheese Factory is still the talk.

Lewis Williams, who has been quite sick for several weeks is thought to be better.

Joshua Barnard's health seems to be improving. Mr. Barnard has been a voter for 49 years and in that time has missed attending town meetings but twice. For 30 years he has been a member of the civil board of the town of Winhall.

WESTON.

Mrs. Biall Peabody, a former resident of this place died in Ludlow last Monday evening.

LONDONDERRY.

Talk of blizzards! What are they compared with a March snow storm in Vermont.

The worst snow storm of the season struck here Monday. It commenced snowing Sunday and is still snowing at this writing (Tuesday), no road is to be seen anywhere, the snow is all drifted up so that one has to get up to the top of the window to see out. If it keeps on we shall have to move up a story or two. Go West young man was good advice in its day, but my advice to-day would be go to shoveling.

Charles Eames is at home.

Mrs. L. P. Sheldon's face is healing up nicely where she had a cancer removed two weeks ago—she is now able to do her work. Drs. L. S. and E. F. Arnold performed the operation.

Cousin Nell, who has been sick for several weeks, is gaining slowly. We hope she will soon be able to correspond for the SIFTER again.

Harry Arthur has taken the town farm in Chester and takes possession this week. That is if the weather permits.

A few couples from here attended the dance at Weston last week Friday night, the band from here furnishing the music.

Miss Zoa Farnum has finished her engagement at Dr. Arnold's. Miss Mary Whitman taking her place.

Miss Rena Abbott of Chester is visiting at her uncles, Harrison Abbott's.

Carson Pierce gave a candy pull at his home to about 25 of his young friends of this place last Saturday evening. Warm cream candy and pop corn were served. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves and they all report an excellent time.

A Most Primitive People.

The natives of New Britain are the most primitive people I have ever seen. Their huts are small and filthy, and little wonder is it that there is much sickness among them. At night they build a fire in the center of the hut and huddle around it for warmth, with no covering over them and nothing under them save a corrse mat. The women are, with a few exceptions, the ugliest specimens of the human race imaginable, and a sight of them will go far to convert one to the Darwinian theory. These creatures seldom wash themselves, and, as they are employed from one year's end to the other in hard labor, their appearance is anything but enticing. The men pass their days in fishing or idling away their time smoking or chewing betel nut.

Both men and women are keen traders, and ever eager to acquire divara, or native money, consisting of very small shells strung upon a thread, and which is counted by the fathom. Every offense of every nature can be atoned for by the payment of this currency, which is hoarded up in houses especially built for the purpose. These houses are under the "Taboo," and are so sacred that they are even secure from robbers, the penalty for violation of the "Taboo" being instant death.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Tracing a Burglar.

Now, take a case of house burglary. Usually there is little or no trace left behind. Well, we look over the people who are in that line. We know that John Smith is in prison in Massachusetts, that George Jones is in Chicago, and so on. With perseverence the thing is brought down to perhaps half a dozen people; we settle it without doubt that one of them committed the offense, then we must fix on the right person. It takes persistence, downright work and ingenuity after you are certain of the man, to get sufficient evidence against him. But all the way through it is our knowledge of thieves, their haunts, ways and companions that helps us out. We don't trust to marvelous intuition; it requires, first of all, knowledge of the people you're dealing with, then patience, thoroughness, pertinacity and intelligence. — Inspector Byrnes.

Cold and Distant.

Miss Clara—Have you met Count Shoreoffsky, Mr. Featherly?
Mr. Featherly—Yes, last evening.
Miss Clara—He has a great deal of dignity of manner.
Mr. Featherly (who is nothing if not funny)—Yes, most Russians are cold and distant, you know, Miss Clara.—New York Sun.

The Clerk and the "Looker."

The salesmen have some disagreeable experiences with customers, and it is sometimes hard for them to keep their tempers. The worst fiend they encounter is the woman who is "only looking." She will approach a counter and immediately spread herself all over it. She asks to see some calico of a certain print; this does not suit her, and she asks for another pattern, only to put it away and call for something else. After the third call the clerk begins to grow suspicious; "she's 'a looker,'" he says to himself. Still she goes on calling for something else.
"Haven't you this in red?"
"Yes'm." (The clerk takes down the desired style.)
"But I wanted something in red, with a leafy figure; haven't you something in that line?"
The clerk looks her over. "Yes, why didn't you say that was what you wanted?"
"Must I tell you your business; I'm sure you're the most perfectly awful stupid man I ever saw; your"——
But here the desired style is spread before her. It does not suit. The leaf is too leafily leafy, or the figure is too utterly too aesthetic, and she suddenly discovers that it was not a red pattern at all that she wanted, but a blue.
By this time her ingenuity is exhausted, and with a sigh she turns away.
"I guess I won't buy today," she says, "because I'm only looking."—D. J. McGrath in Boston Globe.

An Actress Playing Corpse.

It is not easy for a good actor to play a corpse. Miss Annie Russell had an experience the other evening that illustrates a scarce suspected difficulty, yet one that might easily turn a sad scene into a ridiculous farce. In the last act, for fully fifteen minutes, the lady maid of Astolat is seen by the audience stretched out upon her bed that has been lain upon the barge, her limbs rigid, her features firm and one hand visible, stiffened in death. A white light is thrown upon her. A feeling of sadness pervaded the audience as they watched the pale countenance. Not a single person in the theatre knew what was passing through the mind of the corpse. Miss Russell was in perfect agony. She felt that her rigidity of limb and pensiveness of feature were sadly imperiled. Her nose twitched, and she felt that she was about to sneeze. Horrors! Farewell, smooth, placid features locked in death; farewell, tears standing in many eyes, and, horrors!—laughter, convulsive laughter! Fortunately she did not sneeze.
"But, oh my! if I had," she said plaintively, "would it not have been perfectly awful!"—New York Herald.

Here's hoping it will be a thousand years before another snow storm.

The Great Storm.

From 20 to 45 inches of Snow.

Unparaleled in the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

A Large Area covered by the Storm.

Travel by Rail and Highwry completely blocked for days.

The biggest snow storm known during the present generation, in Vermont, set in last Sunday forenoon and lasted until Tuesday night. All day Monday and Monday night the snow fall was accompanied by high winds, and to say that huge drifts were made, almost everywhere is drawing it mildly. The snow fall was fully 30 inches. Main street in this village was drifted beyond anything ever seen by the oldest inhabitants. To give our distant readers, who are acquainted, an idea of the matter we will state that between the residence of Dr. Marden and that of A. E. Cudworth a huge drift lay Tuesday morning fully ten feet deep and extending across the road: from the dug-way to the residence of Larkin Smith was a continuous drift, much of which had to be shoveled before a team could be got through; opposite the Hoskins house and Wm. Thompson's were drifts 6 feet in depth. Not a team was seen on our streets from Monday afternoon until Tuesday afternoon when Mr. O. S. Stuart got out a pair of horses and accompanied by Mr. S. M. Hobart, who had previously shoveled out a few of the worse places, drove from Mr. Stuart's residence to the post-office and down as far as the carriage shop. Wednesday morning the same parties started out, and with the assistance of four or five shovelers reached the old Hubbard Barrett place about noon. On Tuesday afternoon R. E. Bostwick, who lives a mile and a half out, got into the village with a pair of horses, and in the afternoon Josiah Pierce got through from his place and the Holden boys from the hill farm.

On Thursday most of the roads throughout town were opened. Thursday night we received our first mail by the way of Chester, but it contained nothing later than Monday. To bring this mail the driver had to back it from the Andover and Chester town line to Simonsville. Friday, by the same route, we got a full mail with Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday's dailies, from which we learned of the severity of the storm throughout its wide area.

THE NARROW GAUGE.

The regular mail train left this station Monday morning and reached Brattleboro. At the same time the mixed train left Brattleboro for this place but was stalled a little this side of Jamaica, where it remained until Friday when an engine with the snow plow, that left Brattleboro Monday afternoon, reached it and pulled it back to Jamaica. Reinforced by this engine, Saturday morning a push was made to clear the remaining distance, at this end, but early in the morning the snow plow left the track, and in such shape as to compel a delay until Brattleboro could be reached and tackle obtained by which to place it on the track. The track probably not be cleared before Monday or Tuesday so as to resume regular trains. After getting through to this point it will be necessary to go back and clear the lower end of the track that filled in after the snow plow. This will be, as we understand it, from West Dummerston to Brattleboro. Altogether nothing like this storm can be recalled by our oldest inhabitant, yet, compared with many other places in the storm area, we came out of it well. No reports of loss of life or severe suffering has reached us from this locality. Below we give a few press dispatches that will give our readers an idea of the extent and severity of the storm.

The storm extended over New England, all of New York as far west as Buffalo, the greater part of Pennsylvania, the northern part of West Virginia, and the whole of New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia. Canada also came in for her share of the blizzard. Throughout all these sections railroad travel has been generally suspended and telegraphic communication in a great measure cut off from Monday morning until Thursday. Thursday a few of the roads got trains started, but probably not until Saturday will trains be running on schedule time.

IN VERMONT.

Brattleboro, Mar. 13.—The great storm continues, though the wind has gradually subsided. Fully 3 feet of snow has fallen and it is likely to continue snowing through the night. The drifts in the village are even with the eaves of houses, and business is entirely at a standstill.

Montpelier, March 14.—The storm was the heaviest of the winter, 22 inches of new snow with what already lay on the ground making a total depth of nearly four feet upon a level. Where the wind had full sweep, some drifts assumed enormous proportions. Waterbury reports drifts 15 feet deep. Montpelier was for 48 hours cut off from communication with Boston and New York. No mails arrived from the south since Monday. Four Boston and southern mails are now long past due. Two days mails from the north have yet to arrive. Monday's 1 o'clock express from Boston reached here on Tuesday evening, 24 1-2 hours late. This is the only through train from the south since the one leaving Boston on Monday morning.

Bellows Falls, March 14.—The line was cleared during last night between here and White River Junction. There have been no trains in any other direction. The Cheshire and Connecticut River roads will be cleared to-night.

Springfield, March 14.—The storm here was the worst ever known. Over two feet of snow fell. Every road is blockaded. There have been no mail trains or stages since Monday. An effort will be made to establish communication with the outside world to-day.

Vegennes, March 14.—The worst wind and snow storm ever known has been raging since Sunday night. All travel is suspended, and no mails have been received. All the country is blockaded.

ELSEWHERE.

New York, March 14.—Reports show there were 40 trains blockaded yesterday between New York and Albany, and 18 between this city and Yonkers. Only one train was moved this side of Utica, and that was the St. Louis express, which was pulled out of a bank of snow near Spuyten Duyvil last evening, and hauled down over the old river road.

Keene, N. H., March 14.—The blizzard terminated this morning after 60 hours. It was the severest ever known. Three feet of snow has fallen.

Exeter, N. H., March 14.—The streets are nearly impassable; and on main street the snow is piled over 10 feet high.

Bridgton, Me., March 14.—The snow fall in this region was immense. The roads are all blockaded; and there have been no mails since Monday night.

New Haven, Conn., March 14.—The New Haven railroad officials made a vigorous effort to open the road to-day, but failed. It is very doubtful if the New York division will be cleared before Friday.

Worcester, Mass., March 14.—A snow plow from Springfield got through on the Boston & Albany road to-night, having been two days on the road.

Peterboro, N. H., March 14.—This is the worst drifting snow storm for 40 years. Highways are impassable. No trains have arrived since Monday.

Bridgeport, Conn., March 14.—The storm is the severest known in this vicinity for 60 years. The streets are filled with snow to a depth of from five to 20 feet.

Lewes, Del., March 15.—The result of the storm at the Delaware breakwater is summed up as follows: More than a dozen lives have been lost. Twenty-six vessels are either totally or partially wrecked. Two Philadelphia tugs are given up as having foundered. A British bark [illegible] out to sea and has not been heard from in four days.

A number of lives were lost in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, principally among trainmen.

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

OUR POLITICS.

We believe the Republican party to be the instrument of the POLITICAL PROGRESS of the American people; and holding that the honest enforcement of its principles is the best guarantee of the national welfare, we shall support them with all our might; but we shall always treat opposing parties with consideration and fair play.

AGAINST THE SALOON.

The MAIL AND EXPRESS is the recognized leading journal of the country in the great Anti-Saloon Republican movement. It believes that the liquor traffic as it exists to-day in the United States is the enemy of society, a fruitful source of corruption in politics, the ally of anarchy, a school of crime, and, with its avowed purpose of seeking to corruptly control elections and legislation, is a menace to the public welfare and deserves the condemnation of all good men.

In brief, all who wish to have in their homes a FIRST-CLASS NEWSPAPER of national scope, broad views, clean pages and courageous, yet kindly, utterances on all questions of general public interest, will not be disappointed in the MAIL AND EXPRESS, and we respectfully solicit their influence and support.
