FROM NEW YORK.

A bad day out of Jersey-Railroad Connection

WAS experienced the other day by many settlers in some of the Bay-States and the Con necticut Valley region.

The train started from New York for Burlington, Vt., at 7 A. M., with a full complement of passengers and baggage. It was a very fine day, with bright sunshine and a gentle breeze.

A little after 8 o'clock the train arrived at the station in Burlington.

It was then about 10 minutes late, and the passengers were informed that the train would be delayed.

This was due to the fact that the engine had died in the middle of the night, and it was necessary to wait for a new one to arrive.

The passengers were then allowed to go into the depot and take their time.

A few minutes later the new engine arrived, and the train started again.

It was again about 10 minutes late, and the passengers were once more allowed to go into the depot and take their time.

This continued for several hours, with the train arriving late at each stop.

Finally, after several hours of delay, the train arrived at its destination about 10 o'clock in the evening.

The passengers were then allowed to go into the depot and take their

time.

This was the end of the day's journey, and the passengers were left to their own devices for the rest of the night.

The day's journey was a miserable experience for all concerned, and the passengers were left with a lasting impression of the unreliability of the railroad service in that area.
