

God guard our flag, and keep each star as bright as on the day we were first made.

The State of the War and the Prospects.

When the present war for the Union is over, and when the Union shall have been saved, as we trust and believe in a kind Providence it will be men who have learned a great deal of each other—more than this generation ever knew before.

It was not enough for the loyal masses that Gen. McClellan, despite great natural obstacles, drove out the invaders from Western Virginia, in a brilliant campaign of a few weeks.

VIRGINIA CONVENTION.

ADJOURNED SESSION—TWELFTH DAY. MONDAY, AUG. 19, 1861.

The Convention met and was called to order at half past 9 o'clock A. M. Prayer by Rev. Gideon Martin of the M. E. Church.

The President presented a communication from the Governor, tendering his resignation as a member of the Convention.

Mr. Lewis followed in some remarks upon the course of the government here, and suggested that the executive and legislative departments of the government ought to be entirely separated, and that a bill should be brought back to its original representative character.

The present is a most important juncture, in fact the very crisis of our national existence. The traitors know it, and the loyalists know it. If we can keep up the spirits of the people for the next few weeks all is well.

Mr. Van Wickles remarked that in the Convention of 1850, when the Compromise Committee was appointed to consider the question of the white basis, they were appointed by ballot, each member voting for half the committee.

Mr. Lewis followed in some remarks upon the course of the government here, and suggested that the executive and legislative departments of the government ought to be entirely separated.

to Woodshed, and how ardent is their instinctive love of peace. Remember their language and their deeds in April. Recall the words of R. M. McLane, who threatened to drink the Secession with blood.

ABOUT BULL'S RUN AND MANASSAS.

The Reason why the Confederates did not Pursue—They are urged on to Washington.

Mr. Dossy withdrew his motion. Mr. Pottery rose merely, as he said, for the purpose of expressing his cordial approval of the proposition of the gentleman from Preston.

Mr. Frost presented an ordinance to provide for holding a special term of the County Court of Jackson county, to commence on the fourth Thursday of August, 1861, which ordinance was passed.
