ON ETIQUETTE.

THE whole world loves the "perfect gentleman." Last week the Mail and Express gave its readers a rare treat by printing some very pertinent rules for those of its men readers who desired to act the "perfect gentleman."

As the social season is just on the point of beginning, the rules will doubtless be highly appreciated by those young men who are about to make their debut in the gay world of fashionable life. Here they are:

INTRODUCTIONS.

When invited to a party you can address any one you may meet there without having an introduction; the general introduction as you enter the room is sufficient, and all are supposed to be upon an equality when thus invited.

If you have a letter of introduction to a lady, send it in by the servant, and as she will probably be in the parlor, linger a little to give her time to read it.

RECOGNITIONS AND SALUTATIONS.

The superior in rank and station should first salute the inferior; great intimacy may occasionally warrant the disregard of this regulation.

If you meet a lady in the street and offer your hand, do not persist in taking your glove off first if there is any difficulty in so doing.

On meeting a lady in the street do not detain her, but walk by her side during the communication. You will, of course, raise your hat in bidding her adieu, which should be at the corner of the street.

If you speak for a short time to a lady in the open air, intending to leave her directly, remain uncovered, unless she twice desires you to put on your hat.

If a lady with whom you are walking should be bowed to, you will return the salute. Use that hand which is the most distant from the person saluted; if on the right of the lady, use your right hand, and vice versa.

Let your salutation denote the degree of your respect for the person saluted.

If a gentleman raises his hat when saluting you, never fail to do the same. Merely motioning toward the hat is usually sufficient.

DRESS AND FASHION.

Let your dress harmonize with your appearance. The same style of the hair, color of the cravat or cut of the coat may appear preposterous in one individual and appear elegant in another.

Let your jewelry be remarkable for its taste and intrinsic excellence; select and not ostentatious in its abundance.

Clean linen, white as snow, is indispensable if you wish to support the appearance of a gentleman. A bad coat, hat or boots may be worn by a decayed gentleman, but dirty lien never; it would remove him from his order.

Keep your finger nails scrupulously clean, particularly in ladies' company.

Always wear your gloves at church.

In the boxes of a theatre, in a concert room, or upon sitting down in a public refectory, remove your hat. This is one of those little observances that invariably accompanies true politeness.

Do not affect singularity of dress by wearing anything that is so conspicuous as to demand attention; particularly avoid the ruffian style, which requires great elegance of manner and decision of conduct to prevent the dress characterizing the wearer.

CONVERSATION.

At all times avoid a loud tone of voice, but particularly in addressing ladies. Observe men of the world and you will perceive that, however mild their ordinary address, their voice assumes an increased softness in addressing the other sex.

When addressing any one, always look at him; and if several present, address portions of your conversation to each one.

In company endeavor to know something about those you are with, for fear any of your remarks might give offense. Do not ask questions of those you are not acquainted with—they might be inconvenient to answer.

Never speak of private matters in company unless you previously explain the business you wish to converse about, and to a newcomer in the party explain your subject before you continue to converse upon it.

Never laugh at your own remarks; it may be a very agreeable excitation, but it invariably spoils what you are saying.

BE SPARING OF ANECDOTE.

Do not attempt to relate every particular, but seize upon the grand points. Never relate the same anecdote the second time to the same company.

When conversing with young and gay women, do not discourse of metaphysics, but chat about the last fashion, the new opera, or play, the last concert or novel, etc. With single ladies past 25, speak of literary matters, music etc., and silently compliment them by a proper deference to their opinions. With married ladies, inquire about the health of their children, speak of their grace and beauty, etc.

Ladies in conversing have frequently a highly exaggerated method of expression, therefore do not interpret too literally their remarks.

VISITS AND CALLS.

Never have your cards printed, but engraved. A written card, though passable, is not perfectly au fait. If you write them never first draw a line across the card to guide you; it betokens ill breeding.

The subject for conversation should harmonize with the character of your visit and prevent your introducing a gay conversation when paying a visit of condolence, or subjects requiring deep thought and reflection upon causal visits or calls of ceremony.

THE BALL ROOM.

Go quietly through the dance and let the gracefulness of your deportment be more obvious than the complexity of your step.

If a lady waltz with you beware not to press her waist; lightly touch it with the open palm of your hand, lest you leave a disagreeable impression on her mind.

DINNER PARTIES.

To carve with ease and elegance should be understood by every gentleman, and while carving retain your seat.

In helping sauce or vegetables place them upon the side of the viands in the plate.

At dinner, where the common household bread is used, it should never be cut less than an inch and a half thick.

As a general rule never touch with your fingers what you offer another.

In sitting next to a lady see that she wants for nothing, without appearing to watch her plate too closely.

If anything is sent you from the host or hostess, do not offer it to any other person; and when helped do not wait until others are served, but at once arrange your napkin, and proceed to the important business of the moment.

In helping, whenever a spoon can conveniently be used it is preferable to the use of the knife and fork.

When the soup is removed, if no one near the lady of the house asks her to partake of wine, the the host should then select some lady to drink with, which is the signal for others to partake.

When you give a dinner party, do not have coffee brought into the dinning room. It has the appearance of inhospitality, and coffee soon after dinner is highly injurious to the digestive organs.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

Your letters to either sex should be upon the best paper, though plain, inclosed in an envelope and sealed to gentleman with red wax, to ladies with colored wax, not perfumed.

An unmarried man should not cover his fingers with rings.

If there be another chair in the room, do not offer a lady that from which you have just risen.

When entering a concert or lecture room where ladies are present, carry your hat under your left arm, or in your hand with the cavity turned toward you.

If walking with a lady in the country and she should sit upon the ground, remain standing unless requested to be seated.

If you are at a concert or a private musical party, do not beat time with your feet or cane upon the floor.

A Little Daughter

Of a Church of England minister cured of a distressing rash, by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mr. RICHARD BIRKS, the well-known Druggist, 207 McGill st., Montreal, P. Q., says:

I have sold Ayer's Family Medicines for 40 years, and have heard nothing but good said of them. I know of many performed by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one in particular being that of a little daughter of a Church of England minister. The child was literally covered from head to foot with a red and exceedingly troublesome rash, from which she had suffered for two or three years, in spite of the best medical treatment available. Her father was in great distress about the case, and, at my recommendation, at last began to administer Ayer's Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which effected a complete cure, much to her relief and her father's delight. I am sure, were he here to-day, he would testify in the strongest terms as to the merits of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

PHOTOGRAPHY.

Photography is a wonderful art. Incredible as it may seem, it is now possible by the aid of the camera to show the movements of a bird in its flight, a horse at its swiftest pace, or a bullet as it leaves the gun. Very much more that is most marvelous has been accomplished in photography. The publishers of the renowned and popular family weekly, The Detroit Free Press (Detroit, Mich.) have recently been experimenting in the direction of rapid and accurate reproduction of photographs and now announce that they are prepared to make artistic copies at a very low price.

They will send twelve Columbia Photos value $1.00 and The Weekly Free Press one year for $1.10. It is necessary to send a CABINET or card photograph with order. Our readers had better send for a sample copy of The Free Press and learn the particulars of this remarkable offer which thousands are taking advantage of.
