ALFRED WHITAL STERN has been called "Abraham Lincoln's best (posthumous) friend." Others may contend for that distinction and certainly Mr. Stern will not himself dispute them. On the contrary, Mr. Stern has consistently and steadfastly sought to protect the privacy of the relationship and has preferred to remain in the background, anonymous by intention and almost invisible. Yet few men have done as much as Mr. Stern to propagate the Lincoln story and promote among his fellow-citizens a fuller, richer, deeper understanding of Mr. Lincoln's meaning for our time. To that cause, Mr. Stern has selflessly but successfully dedicated himself. He has served it in many ways. He has made gifts of carefully, studiously selected material to institutions at home and abroad. He has stimulated and supported research. He has made publication possible. He has been counselor to his State and Nation in the development of acquisition programs. He has been member of boards and committees. He has, in other words, through his own command of the subject and through his generous benefaction notably enriched the public's knowledge of Abraham Lincoln. This engrossing avocation had its inception many years ago when Mr. Stern's interest in Mr. Lincoln was first aroused. To satisfy it, he set about to form a collection. He defined his subject broadly:
Abraham Lincoln. Although the collection was primarily a collection of books and monographs, it included as well pamphlets, broadsides, periodicals, newspapers, prints and engravings, music, a few manuscripts and medals, even an association-object or two. In 1950, it had reached such proportions that Mr. Stern was somewhat surprised to learn that his was, perhaps, the most extensive in private hands. Its value as a scholarly resource was so obvious that Mr. Stern was prevailed upon to present it to the national collections in the custody of the Library of Congress. The announcement of the gift, made most appropriately on the 87th anniversary of the delivery of the Gettysburg Address, contained the following statement: "Mr. Stern has spared neither pains, nor expense, to make his collection at once worthy of the spirit who called it into being and his fellow-citizens who, in successive generations, may return to it for example and inspiration. To that end, Mr. Stern proposes to accompany his gift with an endowment sufficient for its perpetual enlargement, and to permit, from time to time, the publication of catalogs, bibliographies and studies designed to increase the collection's usefulness." In the interval, Mr. Stern has made constant and distinguished additions to it. He has, moreover, given the Library funds with which to secure appropriate increments. It is housed in a separate room in the Rare Book Division. The collection is, in fact, steadily increasing and will continue to increase. Mr. Stern, in providing the means for the preparation and publication of the catalog, has thought of it as serving three purposes: first, as a bibliographical contribution to the observance of Mr. Lincoln's 150th anniversary; second, as an inducement to students everywhere to examine for themselves the stores of information derivable from the works described in it; and third, as a standing invitation to collectors, authors, and dealers to bring to our notice available material not already recorded in its pages. It is a pleasant duty to make grateful acknowledgment to his generosity and public-mindedness. L. QUINCY MUMFORD, Librarian of Congress.
Introduction THE GENERAL PURPOSE of this catalog is to acquaint scholars, collectors, and the interested public with the content of the notable collection of Lincolniana amassed over a period of 35 years by Mr. Alfred Whital Stern, of Chicago, and presented by him to the Library of Congress. The collection, numbering some 7,000 pieces, is outstanding, not only as to size and the rarity of certain of its individual pieces, but also as to scope. It includes not only writings by and about Lincoln and special collections of materials as outlined below, but a large body of collateral or "background" literature, non-Lincoln in content but in general dating from the Lincoln era or concerned with such subjects as slavery, the Civil War, Reconstruction, and contemporary figures of Lincoln's time. Originally deposited in the Library in 1951, the collection was formally presented in 1953. Since that time, through a generous provision of the donor, the collection has been considerably enlarged and continues to grow. The present catalog therefore is representative of it so far as it was constituted in the Library's Rare Book Division up to September 1958. The major categories into which the collection has been organized, and the arrangement of the entries within these groups, are: (i) Works by Lincoln collections, selections, and individual works, in one alphabet by title; (2) writings about Lincoln and other subjects monographs, pamphlets and serials, in one alphabet by author and title; (3) broadsides, chronologically arranged with undated items at the end of the section; (4) sheet music, in one alphabet by composer or arranger; (5) prints, cartoons, maps, and drawings, chronologically arranged; (6) newspapers, arranged by the titles; (7) autograph letters, chronologically arranged; (8) the Leonard Volk materials; (9) the Merwin collection, chiefly autograph letters arranged by original correspondent; (10) stamps and coins; (11) other ephemera, grouped into prospectuses, mimeographed addresses, programs, proofs, Lincoln associations, etc.; and (12) medals, plaques, and sculpture. Wherever possible, Library of Congress printed catalog cards have been adapted in the preparation of entries for monographic, pamphlet, and serial publications, i.e. for the "by Lincoln" and the "about Lincoln" portions of the catalog. General guides in the preparation of all entries for these types of materials have been the Library's Rules for Descriptive Cataloging in the Library of Congress and its Bibliographical Procedures & Style: A Manual for Bibliographers in the Library of Congress. The rules set forth in these sources have been modified to some extent, or innovations have been made. Such departures (e.g. in recording imprint, collation, etc.) are noted below in the discussion on the elements which make up an entry. These elements include the heading, the body of the entry (title, imprint, collation), location symbols, and notes. Heading. Entries in the first two categories have been made under author, corporate or personal, or title. In regard to personal authorship, the form of the name usually employed is that established by the Library's catalogers, edited so as to consist of the surname followed by the forename in full and middle name or initial. Exceptions to this practice include the use of the habitual form of the name (e.g., McMurtry, R. Gerald), if ascertainable, and frequently the inclusion in the heading of the maiden name of a married woman (within parentheses), whether this appears on the title page 402745 60- IX

or not. Generally any variation between the form of the name adopted in the heading and the form which appears on the title page is indicated by re- tention of the author statement in the body of the entry {e. g., "Packard, Roy D." in the heading and "R. D. Packard" in the author statement, or "Reiter, Harriet G. (Frost)" in the heading and "Harriet G. Reiter" in the author statement). There are, of course, other considerations which have led to the retention of the author statement, among them that of pseudonymous authorship {e. g., "Philips, Judson Pentecost" in the heading and "Hugh Pentecost" in the author statement). Title. The title has been transcribed exactly as it appears on the title page, except for punctuation or capitalization. Line-endings have not been in- dicated. Where necessary to the intelligibility of the title, the author statement has been retained. Titles in non-Latin alphabets, e. g., Greek, Hebrew, Russian, Yiddish, Chinese, and Japanese, have been transliterated and are followed, where desirable, by translations in brackets. Imprint. The statement of imprint (place, pub- lisher, and date) includes, with a few exceptions, all the places of publication and all publishers. On occasion the publisher statement has been abridged through the use of abbreviations {e. g., "Pub." for "Publishing" and "Co." for "Com- pany") and deletions of unessential parts {e. g., of the first name or the initials of well-known pub- lishers). The imprint date of periodical entries has been omitted. Where several issues of a periodical are brought together into one entry, the imprint employed is that of the latest issue. Collation. The collation consists of a statement as to the extent of the work in pages (including un- numbered preliminary and final leaves), or vol- umes; illustrative matter, if any; and the size in centimeters. The collation of periodicals has been omitted, but the pagination of articles on Lincoln contained within the periodicals is provided in notes following the body of the entry. Location Symbols. Call-numbers and copy- numbers of the classified materials have been re- tained in the catalog as a convenience to the users of the collection and to the staff of the Rare Book Division. Location symbols employed, other than call-numbers, include "P" for a group of unclassi- fied materials, largely pamphlets, arranged on the shelves alphabetically by author and title; and "U" for a small collection of unclassified monographs, chiefly in Japanese and Chinese. Notes. Where needed or desired, notes have been made to bring out such matters relating to the work as: source of title, edition statement, physical description to supplement the collation, bibhographic history, bibliographic "points," pro- venance, manuscript inscriptions, content (or partial content), and binding. In the preparation of this catalog, it was in- tended initially that all pieces described be con- nected (through the use of notes, where necessary) with Lincoln. However, works devoted in their entirety to other subjects were frequently en- countered. These contained either no references to Lincoln or so few as not to be found on cursory examination. It therefore was decided to make all entries meaningful in terms of a catalog of Lin- colniana and of Civil War Americana. Explana- tory notes have been added to the entries for items whose titles, standing alone, do not reveal their Lincoln or Civil War connection; and notes indicative of content have been added to entries for publications which are essentially non-Lincoln and non-Civil War, yet contain anything from a brief reference to several chapters or articles on Lincoln or related subjects. The contents of non-Lincoln serial publications (e.g., the Journal of the Illinois State Historical Society) have been analyzed. Serials which might be described as "Lincoln in nature" (e.g., Lincoln Lore) remain unanalyzed, with the exception of certain publications whose individual issues have received separate treatment in "Monaghan" (see "Monaghan Numbers," infra) or had received previous analytic treatment by the Library's catalogers, with printed cards therefore available for adaptation (e.g., Rare Lincolniana). Notes have been employed to indicate bindings in material other than cloth. Binding notes have not been made for items bound in cloth, unless, in the case of two or more copies, the binding differs as to color, texture, stampings, etc. In entries where the phrase "cover title" occurs as the first note and there is no indication as to the binding, the item described is without title page and is bound in printed wrappers. The binding of serials has not been indicated.

Multiple Entries. Combined or multiple entries have been made to bring together in one sequence (not necessarily chronological) the various issues and/or editions of the same work. Combinations have not been made where the various items contain additional unrelated matter. For instance, in the case of Carl Schurz' essay on Lincoln, three basic entries have been made one for the essay alone; another for the essay, to which has been added "testimonies by Emerson, Whittier, Holmes, and Lowell," etc.; and a third which contains, in addition to the foregoing, "The Gettysburg speech and other papers by Abraham Lincoln." These have been treated, not as three editions of the same work, but as three different items. It should be noted further that in the section entitled "Works about Lincoln, the Civil War, etc.," combinations have been made even where a difference in title is involved, but that, as a rule, in the section "Works by Lincoln" combinations have been made only where the title has remained the same. There has been no attempt, for instance, to bring together into one place the many printings of the Cooper Institute speech and the numerous titles under which it appeared. Monaghan Numbers. For many of the items listed in this catalog there are corresponding entries in Jay Monaghan's Lincoln Bibliography, 1858-1939 (Springfield, 111., 1943, 2 v.). Citations by entry number have been made to this standard comprehensive work. They appear in the Stern catalog entries within parentheses, immediately after the collation. They are so constructed as to indicate that the items to which they relate are treated either as basic entries in Monaghan; or as variants, listed or unlisted in notes to the basic entries. The nature of the citations can perhaps best be illustrated by the multiple entry for the 1902, 1903, and 1919 issues of John G. Nicolay and John Hay's A Short Life of Abraham Lincoln. The entry for the 1902 issue contains the citation "Monaghan 1376" (M1376), i.e. the basic entry in Monaghan; the entry for the 1903 issue contains the citation to "Monaghan 1376 variant" (M1376 van), i.e. a variant attested to by Monaghan in notes to the basic entry; and the entry for the 1919 issue contains the citation "variant of Monaghan 1376" (var. of 1376), i.e. a variant which is not listed by Monaghan in his notes to the basic entry. Index. An index at the end of the catalog provides a guide by item number to all personal names appearing in the body of the entries or in notes following the entries. The name of Lincoln has not been indexed nor have names in headings, unless, as in the case of joint authorship, the heading contains two or more names. In such instances all names after the first have been indexed. This catalog is the work not of one individual but of several. Acknowledgment is made particularly of the assistance provided by J. M. Edelstein, John Finzi, and Wesley T. Brandhorst in the preparation of entries for periodicals; for the special collections of materials, such as broadsides, prints, and sheet music; for recently acquired materials; and for many of the pamphlets. Acknowledgments are also due to members of the Library's Orientalia Division and Descriptive Cataloging Division for assistance in the transliteration and translation of titles in non-Latin alphabets; and, finally, to all who through their advice, encouragement, and interest in the project, contributed in large measure to its successful completion. Inserted in case is the note: "About 1902 I was being regularly (shaved) by an old English man named Brown ?? about 70 years old who had the shop in the old Astor House. He had a white handled razor which always seemed to work smooth on my face. One day I asked him how much he would take for it. He said $3.50. As I paid him he said, 'Don't suppose I ought to part with that razor because I shaved Abe Lincoln many times with that blade.' W. R. Wengrovin, D. D. S. Aeolian Building, N. Y. C." 479
