

To the citizens of Washington. A fellow who signs his name William Elliot; he is a clerk in the Patent Office, a foreigner and opposed to this government, has so far degraded himself, that I am compelled to apply to him the epithets that justly belong to him, that is, that he is a coward, a puppy, a poltron, a lyar and a scoundrel. F. C. De Krafft. September 10, 1832.

To the Citizens OF WASHINGTON.

A fellow who signs his name William Elliot; he is a clerk in the Patent Office, a foreigner and oppsed to this government , has so far degraded himself, that I am compelled to apply to him the epithets that justly belong to him, that is, that he is a coward, a puppy, a poltron, a lyar and a scoundrel.

F. C. DE KRAFFT.

September 10, 1832.