

The Folger Poetry series presents John Hawkes. 22 January 1973. [Washington, D.C., 1973].

THE FOLGER POETRY SERIES presents John Hawkes

In all likelihood my true subject may prove to be simply the wind — its changing nature, its rough and whispering characteristics, the various spices of the world which it brings together suddenly in hot or freezing gusts to alter the flavor of our inmost recollections of pleasure or pain — simply that wind to which my heart and also my skin have become especially sensitive.

from Second Skin © John Hawkes

THE FOLGER SHAKESPEARE LIBRARY 22 January 1973