LLOYD GEORGE CALLS ALL PEACE TALK UNFRIENDLY

WAR MINISTERS THAT ANY MORE OF THE KIND NOW WILL BE VIEWSED AS PRO-SERBIA.

ALLIES INTERD "KNOCKOUT"

WILL TURKEY NO INTERFERENCE UNTIL PREVENTION IS CARRIED, SAYS WAR SECRETARY.

RUSSIA IN TO THE DEATH

PEACE ALSO WAR IN THE EMPIRE, HIS DESTRUCTION, WHERE W THE KID.

By R.L. STEVENS

London, Sept. 29.

The British Prime Minister today deposed the earlier statement that Russia would be included in the peace convention.

It has been reported that the British and Russian delegations would have a conference to discuss the terms of peace with Germany. However, in his speech today, Lloyd George said that he was not prepared to consider the possibility of Russia being included in the peace talks.

"I am not prepared to consider the possibility of Russia being included in the peace talks," he said. "We have our own problems to solve, and we cannot afford to consider the possibility of involving another country in our negotiations."

He added that the British government had made it clear that it was not interested in involving Russia in the peace talks until such time as it was prepared to make peace with Germany.

"Russia has not shown the willingness to make peace with Germany," he said. "We cannot afford to involve another country in our negotiations until such time as it is ready to make peace with Germany."

The British prime minister also reiterated his earlier statements that the League of Nations would play a leading role in the peace negotiations.

"The League of Nations is the only organization that can ensure peace in the world," he said. "We cannot afford to leave the negotiations to any other organization."

He added that the British government was committed to the principles of the League of Nations, and that it would not be prepared to consider any terms of peace that did not conform to those principles.

"We cannot afford to consider any terms of peace that do not conform to the principles of the League of Nations," he said. "We will only be prepared to consider terms of peace that conform to those principles."

He concluded by saying that the British government would continue to work towards a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations.

"We will continue to work towards a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations."

He added that the British government was confident that it would be able to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine those principles.

"We are confident that we will be able to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine our principles."

He concluded by saying that the British government was determined to do everything in its power to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations.

"We are determined to do everything in our power to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations."

He added that the British government was confident that it would be able to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine those principles.

"We are confident that we will be able to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine our principles."

He concluded by saying that the British government was determined to do everything in its power to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations.

"We are determined to do everything in our power to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations."

He added that the British government was confident that it would be able to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine those principles.

"We are confident that we will be able to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine our principles."

He concluded by saying that the British government was determined to do everything in its power to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations.

"We are determined to do everything in our power to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations."

He added that the British government was confident that it would be able to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine those principles.

"We are confident that we will be able to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine our principles."

He concluded by saying that the British government was determined to do everything in its power to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations.

"We are determined to do everything in our power to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations."

He added that the British government was confident that it would be able to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine those principles.

"We are confident that we will be able to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine our principles."

He concluded by saying that the British government was determined to do everything in its power to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations.

"We are determined to do everything in our power to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations."

He added that the British government was confident that it would be able to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine those principles.

"We are confident that we will be able to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine our principles."

He concluded by saying that the British government was determined to do everything in its power to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations.

"We are determined to do everything in our power to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations."

He added that the British government was confident that it would be able to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine those principles.

"We are confident that we will be able to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine our principles."

He concluded by saying that the British government was determined to do everything in its power to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations.

"We are determined to do everything in our power to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to compromise on the principles of the League of Nations."

He added that the British government was confident that it would be able to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that it would not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine those principles.

"We are confident that we will be able to achieve a just and lasting peace," he said. "We will not be prepared to make any concessions that would undermine our principles."

He concluded by saying that the British government was determined to do everyth