

This photograph, which has just been brought out of Russia, shows the strict measures made necessary by the critical food shortage in that country. It was taken in the Novi Prospekt, in Petrograd, just as the wagon-loads of precious wheat flour were being brought into town by the farmers. In advance of the wagons and blocking off the street is an armed guard of Bolshevik troops on horseback, keeping the crowds from seizing the foodstuffs. Ten minutes after this picture was taken a sharp skirmish between the Bolsheviks and some hungry citizens took place.

Photograph from Mirzoeff.

The escort of General de Robillant. One of the first pictures of the Italian troops now on the French front.